GENERAL:

At Dallas, Texas:

On 23 May 1968, Confidential Informant, R-1, was contacted and advised that there have been very few significant developments in the North Central Texas area which would concern Project Resistance in the past month. The Informant stated that the Students For A Democratic Society have been unusually quiet on the local college campuses and it appears that the southwestern leadership of this group is attempting to consolidate and strengthen its position before initiating any new programs or aggressive actions. R-1 said that from rumors it would appear that the organization is attempting to establish a Southwestern regional office for this organization, somewhere in the North Central Texas area, however, the attempts are still apparently in the formative stages and no definite action has as yet been taken.

The Informant said there have been no recent peace vigils in Dealy Plaza and this project has apparently been abandoned by the Committee For A Peaceful Solution in Viet Nam and the Students For A Democratic Society. The informant said that apparently about the only effort being made by these two groups at present are in behalf of the McCarthy For President campaign.

R-1 further advised that his sources indicate that Black Power activities in the North Central Texas area have also been curtailed in recent weeks and about the only activity engaged in by this group and its sympathizers was a rally to welcome the local contingent of the Poor People's March at the time it was in the Dallas area. The Informant said that a large number of those making up this welcoming committee were students from Bishop College. It appeared a number of people had been brought into the area from other metropolitan areas, probably Houston, for this occasion. R-1 and local news media reported that the rally and welcoming of the Poor People's March group was extremely quiet and well organized and there were no incidents associated with the activity.

Notes From The Underground continues to be published in the Dallas area and the 16 to 31 May 1968 edition is
